Fund Manager comment

The fixed income space had a bumpy ride in Q3 2025, but ended broadly positive across key fixed Income segments. During the month, focus somewhat shifted from inflation to weakness in the labour market, which negatively impacted the perception of the US economy being strong. The numbers were not only lower than expectations, but also there was a material revision over the numbers that were published earlier.

During the quarter, the US Treasury curve shifted lower, with the 2Y-10Y segment moving approximately 3-5 bps. The 2-10 year segment steepened as well, driven by a higher inflation outlook, an expected fiscal deficit, and concerns about Treasury supply on the longer end. Fed did cut rates by 25 bps during the quarter, and the expectation is for at least two rate cuts during Q4 25.

During Q3-25, Brent ended lower at USD 67.02/b compared to c. USD 67.6/b as of June end. Suppressed levels are a consequence of the expected medium-term increase in OPEC supply.

The QNB Global Sukuk Fund was launched in October 2018 and has distributed thirteen coupon payments. The fund manager continues to seek Sukuk Investments that would add value to the fund in the longer term. The fund is almost at its benchmark duration and will adjust the Fund's duration to capitalize on the long-term curve movement.
